

My Sweetest Sneha,

If you're reading this, it means I've caused you pain, and for that, I am deeply sorry. The thought of hurting you weighs heavily on my heart, and I wish I could turn back time to undo any harm I've done. Please know that it was never my intention to bring you anything but joy and love. In moments like these, it's important to remember that our bond is built on understanding and forgiveness. I hope you can find it in your heart to forgive me, as I am earnestly seeking to make amends. Let's use this as a chance to grow stronger, to learn more about each other, and to deepen the trust between us.

I want you to know that your feelings matter to me, more than words can express. Your hurt is my hurt, and I am committed to healing any wound I may have caused. Communication is the bridge that can bring us back together, and I am here, ready to listen, understand, and cherish your perspective.

Take the time you need to heal, my love. There's no rush, no pressure. I am here, patiently waiting, with open arms and an open heart. When you're ready, let's talk, let's share, let's reconnect. Our relationship is a journey, and like any journey, there will be bumps along the way, but it's how we navigate them that truly matters.

Remember the love that brought us together, the laughter we've shared, and the dreams we've woven into the fabric of our lives. These are the threads that bind us, resilient and enduring. They are the reminders of the beauty we have created together, and the promise of all that is yet to come.

I am here for you, Sneha, in every way, always. My commitment to you is unwavering, and my dedication to our happiness is steadfast. Let's heal together, let's build together, and let's continue to create a love that is compassionate, understanding, and ever-growing.

With all my love and sincerest apologies,
Biraj

